Profiling the Public

Profiling is a screening technique, that determines the risk posed to security by an individual through analysis of travel documents, behaviour and appearance. A degree of non-discriminatory profiling is essential – it enables security resources to be focused on those who pose a higher level of risk to security.

Profiling can be a difficult task without proper training. Our PPT course educates security personnel by helping them identify those who present a threat and recognise abnormal behaviour.

PPT Personal Profiling Training

Effective Profiling Training

This online course in Personal Profiling is designed for security staff working as part of a wider team and covers topics such as;

Your role as a Profiler... Identifying the "normal" person... Identifying suspicious signs... The Terrorist's perspective... Electronic profiling... Personal belongings and their owners

Applicants must also sit a multiple–choice assessment to confirm they have understood the training and that they recall the most important aspects of behavioural analysis theory.

Partnering with the experts

Profiling can be a difficult task without the proper training. Our PPT course aims to educate those who carry out security roles in order to help them identify people who present a threat to security.

This course will assist students in identifying and reducing security risks by recognising those people who display behaviour different from the norm. Simple questioning techniques, the ability to spot suspicious signs, and being aware of those people who do not fall into the "non-risk" category are covered within the PPT course syllabus.

And at the end of a successfully completed course, the user will receive a certificate confirming their knowledge of the theory of basic behavioural analysis.
